McMinn Warming Center seeks generator, volunteers ahead of possible power outages

The McMinn Warming Center is asking for community support as it prepares for possible power outages during the upcoming weekend amid winter weather concerns.

The center is seeking to borrow a portable generator and is also requesting battery-operated lanterns and lights. Organizers said the building is older and not well insulated, which could cause indoor temperatures to drop quickly if electricity is lost.

In addition to equipment needs, the warming center is also calling for volunteers. "After reviewing weather forecasts, the center announced it plans to open Friday through Sunday, Jan. 23-25." Volunteers are needed beginning at 6 p.m. Friday and continuing throughout the weekend, including both daytime and overnight shifts. The center said it relies entirely on volunteers to remain operational.

Anyone able to loan a generator, donate battery-powered lights, or volunteer is encouraged to contact the center's coordinator at 208-241-7806. Volunteer sign-ups are also available online at mcminnwarmingcenter.com.

The McMinn Warming Center provides shelter and warmth during periods of extreme cold for individuals without safe or reliable heating options.
