TWU Student Selected for State Legislative Internship

Tennessee Wesleyan University junior Carson Blevins has been selected for the Tennessee Legislative Intern Program, a competitive opportunity that accepts only 70 to 80 college juniors, seniors and graduate students from across the state each year.

Blevins, a Business Administration major with emphases in Accounting and Management and a minor in English, will serve throughout the 2027 legislative session, assisting a state representative or senator with legislative research, daily activities and constituent-related work.

Selection for the program is based on academic achievement, professional potential and the ability to work effectively in the legislative environment. Blevins is active in several campus organizations, including the Student Government Association, Honors Program and TWU cheer team.

Blevins credited TWU faculty and staff for helping her through the application process and preparing her for the opportunity.

Nearly 1.9 Million Tennesseans Expected to Travel for Thanksgiving

AAA projects more than 1.92 million Tennesseans will travel at least 50 miles from home during the Thanksgiving holiday period, a slight 0.5% decrease from last year but still among the highest travel volumes on record.

Most travelers, about 1.85 million, are expected to drive, while roughly 50,000 will fly and another 24,000 will travel by cruise ships, buses, trains and other modes.

Nationally, AAA forecasts 81.5 million Americans will travel during the Thanksgiving holiday period. Higher costs for gasoline, airfare and lodging are believed to be contributing to the slight decline in travel, though demand remains strong.

AAA advises motorists to prepare their vehicles before traveling, noting that roadside assistance crews responded to more than 500,000 calls during last year's Thanksgiving travel period. Travelers are also encouraged to allow extra time, especially on the Tuesday and Wednesday before Thanksgiving when traffic is expected to be heaviest.
